

As in the glycolysis example, Figure 1847 provides a broad overview of how molecules of acetyl coenzyme A are assembled into long-chain fatty acids by a series of quite familiar organic chemical transformations. Many of these chemical steps are likely exactly the ones you might have proposed if you were carrying out these reactions in a laboratory setting.

Figure 1847

Biosynthetic anabolism: fatty acid synthesis.

