This course examines in detail major landmarks of Russian literature from Pushkin to the present day. Student read approximately thirty pages of assigned texts a week, participate in class discussions, write papers and make presentations. All work is in Russian. The course, which is open to anyone with end-of-third-year proficiency or the equivalent, fulfills a requirement in the concentration program.

For more information, please contact the instructor:
Michael Makin (mlmakin@umich.edu)