Mobile technology has been exerting an undeniable influence on the way we lead our everyday life, the way we see the world around us, and the way we interact with others. This suggests that mobile technology has a significant impact on culture in particular. As such it would seem to add even greater complexity to the current cultural condition in parts of the world where communication technologies have made a rapid entrance into everyday life. This paper will discuss how young Arab students have been experiencing mobile technology. Drawing on individual interviews, it will examine the role that mobile technology plays in their daily life influenced by Arab consciousness.
