Diana J. Mason, RN, PhD, FAAN
Editor-in-Chief
American Journal of Nursing
New York, New York

Judith K. Leavitt, RN, MEd, FAAN
Health Policy Consultant
Barnardville, North Carolina

Mary W. Chaffee, ScD(h), MS, RN, CNAA, FAAN
Captain, Nurse Corps, U.S. Navy
Doctoral Student, School of Nursing
University of Maryland, Baltimore
Montgomery Village, Maryland

SAUNDERS
ELSEVIER

11830 Westline Industrial Drive
St. Louis, MO 63146

POLICY & POLITICS IN NURSING AND HEALTH CARE, FIFTH EDITION

Copyright © 2007 by Saunders, an imprint of Elsevier Inc.

All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced or transmitted in any form or by any electronic or mechanical, including photocopying, recording, or any information storage and retrieval system, without permission in writing from the publisher.
Permissions may be sought directly from Elsevier’s Health Sciences Rights Department in Philadelphia, PA, USA: phone: (+1) 215 239 3804, fax: (+1) 215 239 3805, e-mail: healthpermissions@elsevier.com. You may also complete your request on-line via the Elsevier homepage (http://www.elsevier.com), by selecting Customer Support and then Obtaining Permissions.

Notice

Neither the Publisher nor the Editors assume any responsibility for any loss or injury and/or damage to persons or property arising out of or related to any use of the material contained in this book. It is the responsibility of the treating practitioner, relying on independent expertise and knowledge of the patient, to determine the best treatment and method of application for the patient.

The Publisher

The views expressed in this book are those of the authors and do not reflect the official policy or position of the Department of the Navy, the Department of Defense, or any other agency of the United States Government.

Senior Editor: Yvonne Alexopoulos
Senior Developmental Editor: Lisa P. Newton
Publishing Services Manager: Jeff Patterson
Senior Project Manager: Clay S. Brocker
Designer: Andrea Lutes

Working together libraries in developing
CONFLICT

Gender Issues and

"Conflict issues reflect discussions and actions around health policy. There is much to offer public and private sectors, which can be achieved through more proactive, more participatory, and more inclusive health policy processes. This means engaging in more participatory processes that involve multiple stakeholders, including experts from different fields. It also means promoting equity and diversity in health policy decision-making."

Chapter 3

Political Analysis

Judith K. Lewis' Salty's Corner & Diane M. Magoun
The problem in many political scenarios is to determine the political goals and strategies that will lead to success. In the political arena, knowing the political situation (Studaino, 1994) involves understanding the dynamics of possible outcomes. Predicting "what's in it for me," the politics involved, and how to influence these dynamics to achieve one's objectives is crucial. Understanding the political process is essential for crafting effective strategies. Political analysis is the key to understanding the complex interplay of power and influence in political contexts. The ability to analyze political situations and predict outcomes is vital for successful political maneuvering.
intervention, and results in higher patient satisfaction and lower healthcare costs.

What is the future of this field? How can we continue to improve and innovate in nursing education? The needs of nursing students and the demands of healthcare environments are constantly evolving. In order to meet these demands, nursing education programs must adapt and innovate. This requires a commitment to continuous improvement and a focus on providing high-quality, evidence-based education. By doing so, we can ensure that nursing graduates are well-prepared to meet the challenges of the healthcare industry and improve patient outcomes.
STAKEHOLDERS

Unite as a common voice for the 21st century. The challenges we face today require a collective response. This section introduces key stakeholders and their roles in the decision-making process. It highlights the importance of collaboration and the need for effective communication across different sectors.

GOVERNMENT

The government plays a crucial role in shaping public policy. This section discusses the responsibilities of government agencies, the impact of legislation, and the role of policy implementation.

PRIVATE SECTOR

The private sector is a driving force in the economy. This section explores the role of businesses in innovation, economic development, and job creation. It also examines the responsibilities of corporations to their stakeholders.

NON-PROFIT ORGANIZATIONS

Non-profits are essential in addressing social issues. This section highlights the role of non-profits in providing services, advocacy, and support to marginalized communities.

MEDIA

The media plays a critical role in informing the public. This section discusses the role of media in shaping public opinion, the ethical responsibilities of journalists, and the impact of media on policy-making.

PUBLIC

The public is at the heart of any decision-making process. This section emphasizes the importance of public participation, the role of citizens in decision-making, and the need for inclusive dialogue.

POLITICAL SETTING

The political landscape is dynamic, and understanding it is crucial for effective governance. This section explores the role of parties, interest groups, and the political process in shaping policy outcomes.

LEGISLATIVE PROCESS

The legislative process is complex, and understanding it is essential for effective representation. This section discusses key stages of the legislative process, including bill introduction, committee review, and public hearings.

EXECUTIVE BRANCH

The executive branch is responsible for implementing policy. This section explores the role of the president, the cabinet, and other executive agencies in policy implementation and enforcement.

REVIEW

This review paper is designed to provide an overview of the key concepts and stakeholders involved in the decision-making process. It aims to equip readers with the knowledge to engage effectively in the political landscape.
Introduction to Policy and Politics in Nursing and Health Care

UNIT 1

The role of policy and political engagement are significant in addressing the needs of nurses, especially in the context of policy development and implementation. The influence of policy on health outcomes is crucial, and nurses need to be more proactive in advocating for policy changes that benefit patients and the broader healthcare system. The National Agenda for Mental Health provides a framework for nurses to engage in political processes and advocate for policies that support evidence-based practice and address mental health needs. NURSING CARE PLANS are essential tools for nurses to develop individualized care plans that align with policy goals. By engaging in political processes, nurses can contribute to the improvement of healthcare systems and ensure that patient needs are met.
RESOURCES

The goals of political analysis and policy development are often expressed in terms of desired outcomes, such as increased public safety, reduced crime, or improved health care. Effective policy analysis requires a comprehensive understanding of the issues at hand, as well as an ability to communicate findings clearly to policymakers and the public.

The process of political analysis begins with the identification of a problem or issue that needs to be addressed. This may involve gathering data from various sources, such as government agencies, academic research, or public opinion polls. Once a problem has been identified, it is important to assess the potential solutions and their implications for stakeholders.

A key component of political analysis is the evaluation of policy options. This involves assessing the strengths and weaknesses of each option, as well as its potential impact on various groups and interests. In some cases, alternative perspectives or approaches may be needed to gain acceptance for a particular policy solution.

A successful policy analysis requires clear communication and an understanding of the interests and values of all stakeholders. It is important to consider the potential unintended consequences of a policy and to address any concerns or objections that may arise.

In conclusion, political analysis and policy development are complex and multifaceted processes that require a combination of research, analysis, and communication skills. By following a rigorous and thoughtful approach, it is possible to develop policies that are effective, sustainable, and widely supported by stakeholders.

VALUES ASSESSMENT

The process of assessing values is an important aspect of political analysis. It is essential to consider how different values may conflict or complement each other, and how they might influence policy decisions.

There are numerous approaches to values assessment, ranging from qualitative methods such as content analysis or discourse analysis, to quantitative methods such as survey research or experimental design. Each approach has its strengths and weaknesses, and the choice of method will depend on the specific needs of the analysis.

When assessing values, it is important to consider the diverse perspectives and experiences of different groups and individuals. This may involve conducting focus groups, interviews, or surveys to gather input from a wide range of stakeholders.

Ultimately, the goal of values assessment is to identify areas of consensus or conflict, and to use this information to guide policy decisions in a way that aligns with the values and interests of all stakeholders.
There are no clear and definite models of power, even when we consider the idea of power as a means to an end or in terms of the social, economic, and political processes of power. Power is a complex concept, and its understanding involves the interplay of various factors such as social, economic, and political structures. Power is not merely a static entity but a dynamic force that is constantly evolving and changing. Different societies and contexts have different understandings of power, and these understanding are shaped by historical, cultural, and social factors.

The concept of power is central to the study of politics and governance. It involves the ability to influence the behavior of others, to control resources, and to make decisions that shape the course of events. Power is often exerted through various means, such as the use of force, the control of resources, and the ability to influence others' decisions.

In democratic societies, power is typically distributed among different stakeholders, such as citizens, government officials, and political parties. The exercise of power is often constrained by legal and institutional frameworks, and it is subject to oversight and accountability. However, in authoritarian or totalitarian regimes, power is concentrated in the hands of a single leader or a small elite, and it is not subject to the same constraints.

The study of power is important for understanding how different societies are organized and how they function. It helps us to identify the power dynamics that shape political decisions, economic outcomes, and social relations. By understanding the nature of power, we can better anticipate the unintended consequences of policy decisions and the ways in which different groups and interests are able to influence the course of events.

In summary, power is a complex and multifaceted concept that is central to the study of politics and governance. It involves the ability to influence the behavior of others, to control resources, and to make decisions that shape the course of events. Understanding the nature of power is important for anticipating the unintended consequences of policy decisions and the ways in which different groups and interests are able to influence the course of events.
CHAPTER 6  POLITICAL ANALYSES AND STRATEGIES

Political Strategies

In our democracy, political strategies play a crucial role in shaping public policy and influencing outcomes. This chapter will explore various political strategies used by different groups and organizations to achieve their goals.

1. The Plan

   b. Propagation of ideas. How power is propagated from those with power to those who do not.

   c. Connection power is essential in order to prevent the expansion of information and ideas that are not aligned with the dominant narratives.

   d. Information power results when one individual or group is in control of the flow of information. When information is controlled, it can be used to shape public opinion and influence decision-making processes.

   e. Expert power is based on knowledge, special skills, and experience.

   f. Authority power is derived from the ability to make decisions and direct action. Authority power can be based on position or on the personal qualities of the individual holding the power.
change happens? The answer is partly due to the development of POLITICAL STRATEGIES. This is because political strategies are important in the formulation of policy. Another consideration regarding the development of development that can be both delayed and delayed. Providers must be aware of the potential for policy change and

PERSISTENCE

REVOLUTIONARY

and an explosive sense of change

the issue. Political work begins at the grassroots level, where interested individuals and organizations improvement can be measured in terms of the number of

SUCCESS
The "Plot" Approach

A plot is a diagram or graph used to represent data. In this context, the "Plot" Approach likely refers to a method for analyzing data or visualizing information in a way that helps to understand trends, patterns, or relationships. This approach might be used in various fields such as science, statistics, or social sciences to help in making informed decisions or predictions.
The project was formulated because the project's objective was to develop a comprehensive intervention program to address the identified needs of the community. The project was designed to include education, support, and counseling services to help improve the quality of life for community members.

Box 6-2: The Demise of the Community

The project was formulated because the project's objective was to develop a comprehensive intervention program to address the identified needs of the community. The project was designed to include education, support, and counseling services to help improve the quality of life for community members.

The project was formulated because the project's objective was to develop a comprehensive intervention program to address the identified needs of the community. The project was designed to include education, support, and counseling services to help improve the quality of life for community members.

The project was formulated because the project's objective was to develop a comprehensive intervention program to address the identified needs of the community. The project was designed to include education, support, and counseling services to help improve the quality of life for community members.

The project was formulated because the project's objective was to develop a comprehensive intervention program to address the identified needs of the community. The project was designed to include education, support, and counseling services to help improve the quality of life for community members.

The project was formulated because the project's objective was to develop a comprehensive intervention program to address the identified needs of the community. The project was designed to include education, support, and counseling services to help improve the quality of life for community members.

The project was formulated because the project's objective was to develop a comprehensive intervention program to address the identified needs of the community. The project was designed to include education, support, and counseling services to help improve the quality of life for community members.

The project was formulated because the project's objective was to develop a comprehensive intervention program to address the identified needs of the community. The project was designed to include education, support, and counseling services to help improve the quality of life for community members.

The project was formulated because the project's objective was to develop a comprehensive intervention program to address the identified needs of the community. The project was designed to include education, support, and counseling services to help improve the quality of life for community members.

The project was formulated because the project's objective was to develop a comprehensive intervention program to address the identified needs of the community. The project was designed to include education, support, and counseling services to help improve the quality of life for community members.
DO YOUR HOMEWORK

If you think that you have a problem in our topic, you may want to bring it to the attention of your local or state legislators. You can do this by writing letters to your representatives or by attending their town meetings. If you have a problem with a specific policy, you may want to contact the relevant government agency or department.

Strategies for Success

It's important to know your audience and tailor your message to them. If you're writing to your elected officials, you may want to be more formal and use language that they're familiar with. If you're communicating with the general public, you may want to use more informal language and provide more information in a way that they can understand.

You may also want to consider using visual aids, such as graphs or charts, to help illustrate your points. This can be especially effective if you're trying to communicate complex or technical information.

Finally, it's important to be persistent and follow up with your elected officials or government agencies. It may take time to get a response, but don't be discouraged. If you're passionate about your cause, you'll be more likely to see results.

In summary, it's important to be clear and concise in your communication, and to tailor your message to your audience. With persistence and creativity, you can make a difference in the world.
strike WHILE THE IRON IS HOT

It's not just what you know; it's who you know.

According to the experts, the most important thing to remember is that it's not just what you know, it's who you know. This means that networking and building relationships are crucial in any field.

When you are trying to get ahead, it's important to focus on building strong relationships with people who are in positions of power and influence. This will help you to gain access to opportunities and resources that you might not otherwise have had access to.

One of the most important things you can do is to attend industry events and conferences. This will allow you to meet new people and learn about the latest trends and developments in your field.

Another important strategy is to build relationships with people who are in positions of power and influence. This might mean reaching out to industry leaders or attending exclusive events. It's important to remember that networking is not just about what you know, but also about who you know.

In addition to building relationships, it's also important to focus on developing your skills and expertise. This will help you to stand out from the crowd and become a valuable asset to any company or organization.

Overall, the key to success is to focus on building strong relationships and developing your skills. By doing this, you will be well on your way to achieving your goals and advancing your career.
NOTHING VENTURED, NOTHING GAINED

In the public arena, there is no place like the public arena to express your opinions and make your points heard. If you are not willing to take risks, you will not get the results you desire. Be prepared to confront the opposition and be ready to develop strategies to overcome their arguments.

One must also address problems and issues for which there are no easy solutions, but for which action is necessary. It is in these moments of political activism that meaningful change can occur.

THE BEST DEFENSE IS A GOOD OFFENSE

In the world of opposition, the best defense is a good offense. By being proactive and maintaining open and transparent communication, one can gain support and strengthen their position. It is important to anticipate and address potential challenges early on.

A successful strategy is one that takes into account the concerns of the opposition. By addressing these concerns and demonstrating a willingness to listen, one can build trust and foster a positive relationship.

In summary, the key to success in the political arena is to be proactive, transparent, and prepared to address challenges head-on. By maintaining a strong defense and building a solid foundation, one can achieve success and make meaningful change.

UNITED WE STAND, DIVIDED WE FALL

Projects provided the impetus to increase funding for both care and hospitals. The timing of the initiatives was crucial in ensuring their success.

For community health initiatives with minimal opposition, conferences can be successful. The work of the conference, including feedback from attendees, can help shape future efforts.

A good idea is to have a follow-up session after the conference. This can help reinforce the key points and provide a platform for discussion.

In conclusion, the key to success in the political arena is to be proactive, transparent, and prepared to address challenges head-on. By maintaining a strong defense and building a solid foundation, one can achieve success and make meaningful change.
Introduction to policy and politics in nursing and health care

The vision to achieve the goal that is own cannot be fulfilled unless an adequate number of nurses is supported in access to education and practice environment. This vision is supported by an issue that is own and cannot be achieved without adequate political support and funding.

Summary

INTRODUCTION TO POLICY AND POLITICS IN NURSING AND HEALTH CARE

Roles and functions of nurses as change agents in the workplace

Nurses can play a significant role in advocating for policies that support the health and well-being of patients. By collaborating with policymakers, nurses can work to ensure that policies are evidence-based and aligned with patient needs. Through their expertise in patient care, nurses can provide valuable insights into the impact of policies on patient outcomes. By engaging in policy discussions, nurses can advocate for policies that promote equitable access to care, improve patient outcomes, and ensure the well-being of communities. This role is crucial in shaping policies that drive positive change in healthcare systems. Nurses have a unique perspective on the impact of policies on patient care and can use this knowledge to influence policy decisions. Through collaboration with policymakers and other stakeholders, nurses can contribute to the development of policies that enhance the quality of care and improve health outcomes for all. By actively participating in policy discussions, nurses can ensure that the voices of patients are heard and that nursing perspectives are considered in the development of policies. This role is essential in fostering a culture of collaboration and evidence-based decision-making in healthcare. By advocating for policies that support nursing practice, nurses can work towards improving the health and well-being of patients and communities.
Taking Action

Ruth E. Malone

The Nightingales Take on Big Tobacco

"Neglecting to discuss the industry's role as the disease vector in the tobacco epidemic is like refusing to discuss the role of mosquitoes in a malaria epidemic or rats in an outbreak of bubonic plague."

Rob Cushman, MD, Medical Officer of Health, Ottawa

That was more than 20 years ago, but I vividly remember reading newspaper and magazine articles at the time about new studies showing that actually, smoking was not really so bad, and interviews with academics who compared smoking with eating chocolate or having a glass of wine: something pleasurable. Smoking, they said, was actually helpful because it helped one relax, relieved stress. Although rationally I knew better, I wanted to believe, because I worried about smoking. I also wanted to believe it was true that many other things caused lung cancer besides smoking, because then it would seem like it was only one among so many "risk factors"—rather than being the cause of more than 80% of lung cancers.

What I didn't know then would fill a book. Mainly, though, I didn't realize that the tobacco industry had set up front groups, hired scientists, and organized massive campaigns to promote bogus ideas, had sponsored "distracting" scientific studies selected by industry lawyers to be sure they would result in findings favorable to the industry, and had promoted their intentionally deceptive ideas through